Alaskans need to line up behind governor to push the gas pipeline

We Alaskans have been waiting for a gas line for more than 30 years, and the leaseholders probably would not mind if we sat patiently and waited another 30 years. Gov. Sarah Palin wants what we Alaskans want -- commercialization of the gas reserves sooner rather than later. She has been in office for less than five months, and already she and her team have put together a viable plan in the form of the Alaska Gasline Inducement Act that seeks to get the gas to market. The "must-have" concessions the producers want from us in exchange for their participation and cooperation seem over-reaching in my opinion. They've made billions in our state, and it's time for them to give back in a meaningful way. I say let's get behind the governor and fully support what she is trying to do for our state.

Here is the language of the proclamation, Governor. I don't think it's so bad, considering that we have to be so darned careful about covering all the different groups out there. For the record, you did not sign it, I'm sure it was signed by the signature machine, most procs are. I do not know who wrote it, but I will find out tomorrow. I hope you are having a good day in Fairbanks. Kari.

National Day of Prayer

The Continental Congress called for a National Day of Prayer in 1775. In 1863, Abraham Lincoln established a proclamation for a day of "humiliation, fasting, and prayer." A joint resolution by Congress, signed by President Truman in 1952, declared an annual, national day of prayer. And in 1988, President Ronald Reagan set aside the first Thursday in May as the National Day of Prayer.

Following the devastating event the United States experienced on September 11, 2001, President Bush reminded us that the Congress, through Public Law 100-307, called on citizens to reaffirm the role of prayer in our society and to honor the religious diversity our freedom permits by recognizing this day annually.

As Governor, I recognize that the people of Alaska represent a variety of cultural and religious traditions. I believe that each community of faith warrants the recognition and respect of others.

It is not the intent of this proclamation to promote a particular religion, but rather to encourage thoughtful reflection on the condition of our state and country and to honor our freedom of religious expression whether that is prayer, alms giving, fasting, peace activism, meditation, promotion of social justice, or another form of contemplative action.

Let us not forget that the liberty and freedoms we enjoy are promoted and protected by the willingness, dedication, and sacrifice of our country's military servicemen and women.

On May 3, 2007, I urge you to join fellow Americans across racial, political, and religious boundaries to observe the National Day of Prayer within your respective communities and faith traditions.

May we be thankful for our blessings, reflect on the many needs of our state and nation, treat our neighbors with dignity and respect, and seek moral and spiritual renewal through the religious or spiritual expression which most closely aligns with who we are as individuals.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Sarah Palin, Governor of the State of Alaska, do hereby proclaim May 3, 2007, as:

National Day of Prayer

in Alaska and encourage Alaskans to keep the health, well-being, prosperity, and peace of our state, nation, and world in mind on this day.

Senator Lesil McGuire,

Thank-You for your time and consideration. Senator, with all due respect, I believe you have been mislead concerning Larry Edfelt on Commercial fishing. He is not a friend of Upper Cook Inlet fishermen. Please review his comments made at recent BOF teleconference regarding the emergency petition. He spoke very strongly against managing this fishery according to the escapement goals prescribed in the management plan. If you would like more info on this please feel free to contact me again at any time. This issue is extremely important to me and I appreciate your concern. As far as balance on the BOF is concerned, I am very worried that members appointed under the guise of a commercial fishery proponent who then act in opposition to our needs only skew the BOF even farther away from what is fair. Commercial fishermen in Cook Inlet have never asked for more than their fair share, only to be able to harvest surplus stocks above escapement goals, including a sport harvest. Is that so Unreasonable? Recent years have seen repeated overescapement to both the Kenai and Kasilof rivers simply because the BOF has taken away the ability of trained managers to use their tools to manage. With a Cook Inlet meeting of the BOF coming up this next winter, the importance of this issue is paramount to my livelihood. The BOF is an extension of the Legislature and it is your prerogative to ensure integrity of that board. Please resist confirmation of Howrd Delo and Larry Edfelt. Once again, Thank-You for your time.

I have many commercial fisherman contacts who believe that although they would prefer Roland Maw, that Larry Edfelt is a good pick for commercial interests too. There is no question though, that Howard Delo is a sports fish guy. So, what I will be looking for is balance. The commercial industry is an important part of our economy and your livelihood matters to me a great deal.

Senator Lesil McGuire,

This is the first time I have written to you mostly because I reserve such action for what I believe is truly important. The issue at hand is of extreme importance to me. You soon will be faced with confirmation hearings on three Board of Fish appointees and I have great concerns with two of these men. As you know, the Board of Fish is to be balanced and fair. I am a commercial fisherman and am increasingly worried about a BOF that is becoming more and more unbalanced.Two of these men lean strongly toward sport fisheries issues while at least one would be replacing a commercial leaning member. I have voted for you in the House as well as the Senate because I feel you are the right person for the job, and hope that you see the gravity of this issue. Howard Delo and Larry Edfelt are poor (at best) candidates for the BOF. Please resist their confirmation. There were some great candidates seeking those appointments (Roland Maw and Dwight Kramer) that I wish Gov. Palin would have supported.Thank-You for your time and consideration.

It was, and I apologize for my language here, mamby-pamby pabulum. I did not have an opportunity to read it before around 10 a.m. this morning.

After the Governor's Prayer Breakfast, and your statements there (which I again heard much positive feedback on today from the pastors who were at the Day of Prayer gathering), the proclamation was almost embarrassing. I am always honored to offer remarks on your behalf and I don't mean to sound ungrateful for the opportunity - but, you asked us to tell it to you straight and so, I'm believing that you meant that.

I held onto this email for about 30 minutes before sending it. In that time, I was told the Valley pastors who gathered for National Day of Prayer did not read the proclamation because of the wording. I guess that' s my confirmation that I should hit the send button.

Thanks for all that you do and I know you're working hard on other issues, but I have been a witness to what happens when a Governor is insulated from any criticism. I believe you can be an incredibly successful Governor.

Larry,

There is a tentative meeting set up with Governor Palin, Mike Tibbles, the members of the Judicial Council, you, and me on July 12th. I will be in touch when the date becomes more firm.

What time on the 12th could you all arrive in Juneau? This will help in finding a time to meet in the conference room. We prefer to have a meeting where we can hear from each of the members and converse casually, rather than have Governor Palin stand up and give a speech. I look forward to hearing from you regarding arrival times so I can touch base with Kari Spencer, the governor's scheduler. I will also check with Attorney General Colberg to see if he will be in Juneau that day and can attend the meeting also.

competition, just come in to talk to us alone.'

"AGIA's message is clear: to set up competition by providing inducements and to establish what the state's bottom line requirements are to be eligible for those inducements. The producers have clearly turned up the volume . . . they don't like the (requirements)."

Meanwhile, the appearance of Dickinson, the former Murkowski consultant, before two committees reviewing the bill was controversial in itself for his role in backing Murkowski's proposed deal with the producers.

The Legislative Budget and Audit Committee, which is comprised of state senators and representatives, hired Dickinson. The committee has routinely hired consultants to examine a governor's gas line proposals.

Committee Chairman Rep. Ralph Samuels, R-Anchorage, said he understood the criticism that could come with hiring Dickinson. Samuels said he made sure Dickinson has never worked for any of the producers before making the recommendation.

"I know some people might have a problem with it," Samuels said. "But he's got institutional knowledge."

House Finance Committee co-Chairman Mike Chenault, R-Nikiski, said there was value in Dickinson's presentation, which also included the gas line bill's implications on the current production tax system.

"What it did was show there is lots of ways to figure the value," Chenault said. "He put more information out there and more information helps the process. He adds to that.

"Is he the right person, I don't know, but he's probably one of the more knowledgeable people to talk about this issue."

Dickinson said the current administration's oil and gas economist, Antony Scott, failed to consider a producer's financial commitment for shipping the gas in the pipeline. This cost is called firm transportation commitment, or an FT, a term heard regularly in gas line hearings.

Dickinson told the House and Senate finance committees how Scott's analysis potentially inflates the financial benefits to the companies while the administration touts Palin's Alaska Gasline Inducement Act to lawmakers.

"(Projects) need to be valued properly," Dickinson said. "When you see extraordinarily high rates of return being suggested for this project, it may be because the cost of FT commitments are not being properly evaluated. What I'm challenging are numbers that suggest that it is wildly profitable."

Scott examined the potential value on a $20 billion pipeline project that goes from the North Slope to Alberta, Canada. He examined returns for producers as pipeline owners and as shippers of gas, and again as just shippers.

Three measurements of return were the net present value, which is the current value of future profits; the rate of return; and a profitability index. Scott said his analysis omitted no transportation costs.

"We can't come up with a situation that generates a return of under 10 percent," Scott said in an interview Thursday. "That's a pretty powerful statement."

Neither Dickinson nor the producers, who shot down Scott's work all week, would present their own figures to counter Scott's analysis.

"I think it's a profitable project. How profitable is certainly arguable, depending on the assumptions," said Fred Dyson, R-Eagle River, who serves on the Senate Finance Committee. "Everything we've seen has shown a very significant rate of return."

In the House Finance Committee hearing, Rep. Les Gara, D-Anchorage, wondered why Dickinson didn't make these assertions when the Murkowski administration backed a proposed deal with the producers that included a financial stake in the pipeline for Alaska.

"I guess I would have appreciated somebody telling me last year that when we were doing the FT commitment, that was a big risk for us too," Gara said.

Dickinson said he believed lawmakers were informed.
